Title: James Rubin Collection of Indian Classical Music

Identifier: AWM Spec Coll 94

Date: 1957-1989

Physical Description: 1 collection (Sound recordings: 53 linear feet (983 sound tape reels, analog, various sizes) ; 4.75 linear feet (431 sound discs, analog, 78 rpm). Accompanying materials: 4 linear feet.)

Overview:

Sound recordings made in India and America between 1957 and 1989. The collection consists mostly of Carnatic music with some programs of Hindustani music. These are primarily live concert recordings with a few programs recorded from All India Radio. Most of the recordings were made during the annual concert season in Chennai in December. Several were also made at the Tyāgarāja Arādhana Festival that takes place each January in the town of Tiruvayāru. The collection also includes copies of commercial recordings of both Indian and non-Indian music as well as a few miscellaneous recordings. The documentation consists of 32 small handwritten notebooks and 15 program books printed by the Music Academy. The collection also includes 431 78 RPM records of Indian and Middle Eastern music as well as several books about Indian music.

Historical Note

James Rubin was an enthusiastic collector and promoter of Indian music even though he had no formal training. He was the founder and executive director of the Pan Orient Arts Foundation, an organization that helped organize concerts by Indian artists in the United States. He was born in Boston in 1927; he graduated from Brookline High School in 1943 and Brown University in 1948. During World War II he served in the Army Air Corps. He was the vice president of the First Hartford Realty Company of Manchester, CT for 35 years until he retired in 1989. He died of leukemia on March 17, 1991 at the age of 64. The earliest recording in his collection is a performance by sitarist Ravi Shankar made at Rubin's Newtonville, MA home in March 1957; his last recording was made in Madras in December 1987. In the interval he traveled to India twenty times to attend the annual music festival in Madras and make recordings. He is still fondly remembered by musicians in Madras as 'Rubin Mama' (Uncle Rubin) for wearing Indian dress, his love of music, and his avuncular manner. He was a close associate of the famous singer M.S. Subbulakshmi and recorded many of her concerts. He arranged her nationwide tour of the United States that culminated in her famous performance at the United Nations

Scope And Contents

The collection represents James Rubin's recordings of Indian music in India and America from 1957 through 1989. It consists of over one thousand reels of audio tape and accompanying documentation. About 400 of the tapes were recorded in India and 100 in the United States. The remaining tapes contain edited copies of other recordings in the collection, copies of commercial recordings, tapes recorded by other people and given to James Rubin, and live recordings of miscellaneous events in the Boston area. The documentation consists of several small notebooks containing notes written in India by James Rubin and his assistants. These contain performance details including the date, time, and place of each performance; the performers' names; and the title, composer, raga and tala of each composition. These hand-written notes are supplemented by program books published by the Music Academy and broadcast listings published by All India Radio. Details of performances recorded in the United States are either written on the tape boxes themselves or are included as annotated program notes inside the boxes. The title of each composition is transliterated from the original language according to the system used by the Library of Congress. The names of the Carnatic ragas are rendered according to Walter Kaufmann's The Ragas of South India. Kaufmann's The Ragas of North India is followed for Hindustani ragas when possible. Ragas not found in Kaufmann follow Patrick Moutal's Hindustāni Rāga-s Index. Names of performers use the forms found in the OCLC authority file whenever possible. When no authorized form exists the name is transliterated from its Sanskrit form or from Tamil or Urdu when appropriate.

Field Trip 4, 1967-12 - 1968-01

Date: 1967-12 - 1968-01

General Note:

James Rubin was in India for a month and made recordings, between December 25, 1967, January 24, 1968. He started in Madras where he made recordings of live concerts and radio programs. He traveled to Delhi between January 5, 1968, and January 12, 1968. While in Delhi he recorded several radio programs of Hindustani Music and three reels of Sikh Sacred Music. He returned to South India to make more recordings and to attend the Tyāgarāja Arādhana festival in Thiruvaiyāru which was held between January 17, 1968, January 22, 1968. While this festival is an annual event, it was particularly significant because this year marked the two hundredth anniversary of Tyāgarāja's birth. Many of the recordings Rubin made on this trip were part of a project demonstrating Indian music which he and Brian Q. Silver produced for the New York State Board of Education. Some of the tapes are recorded in stereo and others are in mono. Rubin listed stereo and mono tapes in separate notebooks and numbered the tapes in parallel sequence. The stereo tapes are listed first in this catalog.

Tape Tracks 2 and 4

Program 1, 1968-01-20

Date: 1968-01-20

General Note:

An audio postcard recorded at the Tyāgarāja Arādhana Festival in Thiruvaiyāru, Tamil Nadu at 8:00 AM. This track contains James Rubin's impression of the famous Pañcaratna Kritis sung in chorus by all the assembled musicians. The recording is much more interesting for its evocation of the large crowd of musicians and spectators than for the recording of the songs.

Field Trip 5, 1968-12 - 1969-01

Date: 1968-12 - 1969-01

General Note:

James Rubin visited Madras between December 20, 1968 and January 1, 1969. All of the concerts he recorded were live performances. Most of these concerts were at the Music Academy. On December 31, 1968, Rubin visited V.D. Swami at his farm at Poonammallee where several famous musicians had been invited to perform at an informal gathering. Rubin used two kinds of tape--190 and 290--and kept separate notebooks for each. These notebooks run concurrently and some performances are partially recorded in each book.

Field Trip 7, 1972-01

Date: 1972-01

General Note:

James Rubin made recordings in India between January 11 and January 24, 1972. These recordings were made in Madras, Bangalore, and Bombay. These tapes represent a wide scope of recording contexts. The first and last tapes in the series are recorded from All India Radio in Madras and Bombay. The second tape contains dubs of old 78 rpm records from the private collection of M.S. Subbulakshmi. One tape is a dub of a concert recorded by R.K. Narayan, the novelist. The other tapes are of live performances recorded in the houses of some of Rubin's friends or at various concert halls in Madras and Bangalore. Rubin also recorded a consultation with an astrologer about his horoscope.

Field Trip 12, 1978-01

Date: 1978-01

General Note:

James Rubin recorded these tapes at the Tyāgarāja Arādhana Festival in Tiruvayāru, Tamil Nadu between January 25 and 29, 1978. This festival is held every year at the site of the tomb of the composer Tyāgarāja. Musicians come to honor the memory of the composer by performing a few of his compositions. A large pavilion is constructed out of bamboo with two stages. Musicians set up on one stage while the performance is taking place on the other. Rubin used two sets of microphones and two tape recorders. Sometimes his mixer did not function properly and performances alternate between tapes instead of being recorded in chronological sequence.

Field Trip 13, 1979-01

Date: 1979-01

General Note:

James Rubin recorded these tapes at the Tyāgarāja Arādhana Festival in Tiruvayāru, Tamil Nadu from January 17 to January 21, 1979. This festival is held every year at the site of the tomb of the composer Tyāgarāja. Musicians come to honor the memory of the composer by performing a few of his compositions. A large pavilion is constructed out of bamboo with two stages. Musicians set up on one stage while the performance is taking place on the other. Rubin used two sets of microphones and two tape recorders.

Field Trip 14, 1980-01

Date: 1980-01

General Note:

James Rubin recorded these tapes at the Tyāgarāja Arādhana Festival in Tiruvayāru, Tamil Nadu from January 5 to January 7, 1980. This festival is held every year at the site of the tomb of the composer Tyāgarāja. Musicians come to honor the memory of the composer by performing a few of his compositions. A large pavilion is constructed out of bamboo with two stages. Musicians set up on one stage while the performance is taking place on the other. Rubin used two sets of microphones and two tape recorders. He did have a mixer that he hoped to use to switch between sets of microphones and record the programs in order, but it did not function properly and performances alternate between tapes instead of being recorded in chronological sequence. Rubin also recorded one concert in Madras on January 3, 1980. This concert is listed at the end of this field trip

Field Trip 18, 1987-12

Date: 1987-12

General Note:

James Rubin made recordings in Madras between December 19, 1987 and December 31, 1987. All of the recordings he made that year were of the meetings of the Experts Committee of the Music Academy. These meetings take place in the morning during the Music Academy's annual concert series. The meetings begin with a series of short devotional songs along a particular theme sung by an amateur vocal ensemble. These songs are followed by lectures and demonstrations about various aspects of Indian music. The sessions may also include concerts by senior musicians featuring unusual compositions of particular interest to scholars.
